Governing through diversity: migration societies in post-multiculturalist times

[Contents page and author biographies of book]
Governing through Diversity:
Migration Societies in Post-Multiculturalist Times

Edited by
Tatiana Matejskova & Marco Antonsich

(forthcoming in Palgrave MacMillan, Global Diversities series)
Table of Contents

List of Figures

Notes on Contributors

Introduction: Governing through Diversity

Tatiana Matejskova & Marco Antonsich

A. IDEATIONAL FIELD: CONCEPTUALIZATION AND SCHEMES

Chapter 1. The difference diversity makes: A principle, a lens, an empirical attribute for a majority-minority relations

Paolo Boccagni

Chapter 2. Cultural diversity and social inequalities

Thomas Faist

Chapter 3. Diversity in crisis: reshaping contemporary Ireland

Mary Gilmartin

B. TECHNICAL FIELD: TECHNIQUES AND DIVERSITY MANAGEMENT

Chapter 4. Paradoxes of (e)quality and good will in managing diversity: A Dutch case in the philanthropic sector

Halleh Ghorashi, Christine Carabain & Ewa Szepietowska

Chapter 5. Grassroots narratives and practices of diversity in Mostar and Novi Sad

Piotr Goldstein

Chapter 6. Dealing with Diversity in Education: A Critical View on Goals and Outcomes

Cristina Allemann-Ghionda
C. SOCIAL FIELD: SOCIAL RELATIONS OF HETEROGENEITY

Chapter 7. Theorizing multiculturalism and diversity: The implications of intersectionality

Gill Valentine

Chapter 8. Southern discomfort: Defensive urban citizenship in Tel Aviv

Nir Cohen

Chapter 9. Nationalism and diversity in schools

Elizabeth Mavroudi & Louise Holt

Conclusion. Nation and diversity: A false conundrum

Marco Antonsich & Tatiana Matejskova
List of Figures

(the first number indicates the number of the chapter given figure/s appear/s in) s

3.1 Equality Authority Employment Casework Activity, 2007-2012 112
3.2 Equality Authority Provision of Goods and Services Casework Activity, 2007-2012 114
3.3 Changing discourses of diversity in Ireland 118
4.1 Dutch charitable organizations with at least one member of an ethnic minority 140
5.1 A paper “diversity bridge” constructed by the participants of a “diversity program” in Mostar 165
5.2 A plaque on the building of a Novi Sad NGO 169
5.3 An NGO activist looking at the Bogdan Bogdanović’s Partisan’s Memorial 173
8.1 Concentration of Asylum Seekers in Southern Tel Aviv, By Neighborhood 249
Note on Contributors

Cristina Allemann-Ghionda, who was born in Rome and raised in several countries in multilingual and multicultural settings, was appointed as a Full Professor of Comparative and Intercultural Education at the University of Cologne from 2000 to 2014. Previously, she was active in Switzerland as a teacher in bilingual classrooms and as an organizer in adult education, then (1990-2000) as a lecturer and researcher at the universities of Zürich, Berne, Geneva, and Münster, where she earned her habilitation (venia legendi). Her research fields include comparative and intercultural studies of educational policies and theories; multilingualism; intercultural communication; diversity competence in medicine; internationalization and diversity management in higher education. She published twenty books, including three as a single author, and around 120 papers and chapters in journals or edited volumes in English, German, French, Italian, Spanish, Polish and Turkish.

Marco Antonsich is a Senior Lecturer in Human Geography at the University of Loughborough. His work lies at the intersection between territory, power, and identity. More specifically, throughout his research career, he has explored three themes: the production of Western geopolitical discourses; the relationship between territory and identity in the age of globalization at multiple scales (local, regional, national, and European); and, more recently, how togetherness in diversity is theorized and lived within contemporary multicultural societies. Funded by various institutions (U.S. National Science Foundation; NATO and Italian National Research Council; CIMO-Finland; and the European Commission), his work has appeared in leading academic journals: Progress in Human Geography, Political Geography, European Urban and Paolo Boccagni is a lecturer in Sociology at the Department of Sociology and Social Research, University of Trento, Italy. His main research fields are transnationalism and integration, care, emotions, ethnicity, diversity and social welfare. He is currently working on migrants’ home-making practices and on migration as a form of transnational social protection, as well as on ethnic boundary-making in everyday life and on the nexus between ethno-cultural diversity and social work practice and provision. His publications include articles in European Journal of Social Theory, Global Networks, Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies, British Journal of Social Work and Critical Social Policy.

Christine Carabain is head of research at NCDO, the Dutch knowledge- and advice center on global citizenship, Amsterdam, the Netherlands. Her recent research focuses on global citizenship and how the Dutch relate themselves to global issues regarding sustainability of society, sustainability of nature and international cooperation. She has a background in social and economic psychology and holds a PhD in social research methodology.

Nir Cohen is a Lecturer in the Department of Geography and Environment at Bar Ilan University. His research interests include international migration, state-diaspora relations, citizenship theory and ethnic politics in urban contexts. He has published a dozen articles in academic journals, including Environment and Planning D, Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies, Journal of Historical Geography, and GeoJournal.
Thomas Faist is a Professor for Sociology at the Faculty of Sociology at Bielefeld University, Dean of the Faculty and deputy director of the Collaborative Research Centre 882 From Heterogeneities to Inequalities. His fields of interest are transnational relations, citizenship, social policy, development and migration. He held visiting professorships at Malmö University and the University of Toronto. He is a member of the editorial boards of Ethnic and Racial Studies, Social Problems, South Asian Diaspora, Social Inclusion, Migration and Development and the Pakistan Journal of Social Issues. Books he recently co-published include Beyond Methodological Nationalism: Social Science Research Methodologies in Transition (2012), Transnational Migration (2013), and Disentangling Migration and Climate Change (2013). His current research focuses on the transnational social question.

Halleh Ghorashi is Full Professor of Diversity and Integration in the Department of Sociology at the VU University Amsterdam, the Netherlands. She is the author of Ways to Survive, Battles to Win: Iranian Women Exiles in the Netherlands and the United States (Nova Science Publishers, 2003) and co-editor of edited volumes such as, Paradoxes of Cultural Recognition: Perspectives from Northern Europe (together with S. Alghasi and T.H. Eriksen, Ashgate 2009) and Muslim diaspora in the West: Negotiating Gender, Home and Belonging (together with H. Moghissi, Surrey, Ashgate 2010). She has published extensively on topics such as identity, diasporic positioning, cultural diversity, and emancipation with the particular focus on the narratives of identity, migration and belonging in the context of growing culturalism.
Mary Gilmartin is Senior Lecturer in the Department of Geography at Maynooth University, Ireland. Her research on migration has been published in a variety of journals, including European Urban and Regional Studies, Health & Place and Social Identities. She recently co-edited Migrations: Ireland in Global World (with Allen White, published by Manchester University Press in 2013). She is Managing Editor of Social & Cultural Geography.

Piotr Goldstein holds an MA in Philosophy (University of Lodz), an MA in International Peace Work (University of Trieste) and a PhD from the University of Manchester. The contribution in this book is a result of his postdoctoral fellowship at the University of Novi Sad where he also worked on a project assessing the role of bookshop-cafés in strengthening civil society in Eastern and Western Europe. His research focuses on the diversity of civil society actors in Eastern Europe and particularly on groups operating without external funding. Currently he is working on turning his PhD, titled Building Bridges: NGOs, Associations, Movements, Facebook Groups, and the State of Civil Society in Mostar and Novi Sad, into a book.

Louise Holt is a Senior Lecturer in Human Geography at Loughborough University. Her research interests as a critical social and cultural geographer focus upon exploring how enduring inequalities are reproduced and/or transformed at a variety of intersecting spatial scales; the ways in which everyday practices in specific spaces/places are connected to, reproduce, and can potentially transform broader-scale inequalities that coalesce around intersecting bodily morphologies (particularly childhood and disability, but also class, ethnicity and gender). She has developed the concept of embodied social capital to clarify these concerns and has recently engaged with emotional capital to further consider how and why individuals become subjected within frameworks of power, with specific, material, implications. Besides a number of peer-review papers, she recently edited Geographies of Children, Youth: An International Perspective and co-edited Diverse Spaces of Childhood and Youth, both published by Routledge (2010, 2013 respectively).

Tatiana Matejskova is an Assistant Professor of Mobility and Urban studies at Roskilde University in Denmark. In her research she is interested in both, the governance of transnational migrants as a component of state-making and citizenship, and immigrant subjectivity, belonging and experience. Her publications focusing on urban encounters across difference, immigrant understanding of integration, local micro-economies of belonging, and question of the national in immigration societies have appeared in such journals as Social & Cultural Geography, Antipode: Journal of Radical Geography, Urban Geography, Migration Studies and Ethnicities.

Elizabeth Mavroudi is a Lecturer in Human Geography at Loughborough University. She has conducted research, and written scholarly articles, on the Palestinian and Greek diasporas (in Greece and Australia respectively), as well as non-EEA migrant perceptions of UK immigration policy for journals such as Geoforum, Global Networks, Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies and Political Geography. She is currently doing work on Western foreigners living in Greece and their negotiations of belonging and integration. She has recently co-edited a book entitled Dismantling Diasporas: Rethinking the Geographies of Diasporic Identity, Connection and Development (Ashgate) and is in the process of co-writing a book on global migration for Routledge.
Ewa Szepietowska has a Masters degree in social sciences and currently works as master thesis supervisor at the Faculty of Social Sciences, VU University in Amsterdam, the Netherlands. Her research field is diversity management, migration, refugees (organizations) and women’s rights, and marginal social groups. She works as a researcher, consultant and project manager, and social-pedagogical worker with several charitable organizations in The Netherlands.

Gill Valentine is a professor of Geography and Pro-Vice Chancellor for the Social Sciences at the University of Sheffield, UK. Her research interests are focused in three interconnected areas: social identities and belonging; childhood, parenting and family life; and urban cultures and consumption. Gill has (co)authored/edited 15 books (with translations in Japanese, Chinese and Korean) and over 170 journal articles/reports. She was a co-founder and co-editor of the international journal Social & Cultural Geography (2000-08), and co-editor of Gender, Place and Culture (1999-2004). Her research has been recognized by the award of a Philip Leverhulme Prize and a Royal Geographical Society-Institute of British Geographies Gill Memorial Award.