Discussion group report: Low-cost technology other than latrines and hand pumps

This item was submitted to Loughborough University’s Institutional Repository by the/an author.

Additional Information:

- This is a conference paper.

Metadata Record: https://dspace.lboro.ac.uk/2134/29929

Version: Published

Publisher: © WEDC, Loughborough University

Rights: This work is made available according to the conditions of the Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-NoDerivatives 4.0 International (CC BY-NC-ND 4.0) licence. Full details of this licence are available at: https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-nd/4.0/

Please cite the published version.
Discussion of the paper suggested that although the cost appeared relatively small and, once installed, the hydrocyclone, was maintenance free, water for domestic consumption would still need treatment. In addition further research and field testing was necessary to determine in-performance running and maintenance costs. It was, therefore, not easy to conclude that this particular technology was suitable for rural areas.