Part 38: The Uncanny Aids
A Charcoal-Burner

This item was submitted to Loughborough University's Institutional Repository by the/an author.

Additional Information:

- This short paper was published in the magazine Stimulus > Respond. The definitive version is available at: http://www.stimulusrespond.com/

Metadata Record: https://dspace.lboro.ac.uk/2134/9715

Version: Accepted for publication

Publisher: Stimulus > Respond (© Phil Sawdon and Rob Ward)

Please cite the published version.
Draw. (E.) M. E. drawn.

A.S. draga.

Draw. (E.) M. E. drawn.

A.S. draga.

Draw. (E.) M. E. drawn.

A.S. draga.

Draw. (E.) M. E. drawn.

A.S. draga.
“Economy” is here used in its etymological sense of “law” (nomos) of the “house” (oikos) and as a counter-balance to the Unheimliche (uncanny/un-homely).

I returned and scratched on the tree, bloody as usual, and by now the lines were once more justified. I announced that we were going for an elliptical traverse, a ride, and put the saddle on the donkey, and then sat on it and the pencil (which is the pencil) and the consequences to the extended field, but you must sit on the donkey. That is the pencil, and put it in the pins so loosely that you can extract them with your teeth, and don’t have any knots. When you get out into the middle at the point farthest from either end, you must ride away from them, but don’t turn around until you get to the beginning.”

Charcoal is formed by heating wood and wood tar in large volumes of oxygen to the air. Warm charcoal is formed by heating charcoal gas. Thus charcoal forms hydrogen in the carbonyl, chlorides, and carbonates.

Economy is here used in its etymological sense of “law” (nomos) of the “house” (oikos) and as a counter-balance to the Unheimliche (uncanny/un-homely).
There could have been a conclusive flourish—a serpentine underlining—but no such thing exists. The burning gates of Easel and Donkey.

A donkey is an artist’s sitting easel. The German word for donkey is Esel. Canvas, stretched and seasoned, forms an artist’s canvas. Carbon 14 is used as a Carbon...